About the Workshop

Designing a robust research protocol is a cornerstone of any high-quality epidemiological study. This two-day hands-on workshop is designed to equip postgraduate students, research scholars, and faculty members from KUHS-affiliated institutions with the practical skills necessary to transform a research idea into a complete research protocol.

With expert-led sessions, guided group activities, and structured feedback, participants will develop each component of a research protocol aligned with the KUHS synopsis format. By the end of the workshop, each participant will submit a complete protocol draft ready for institutional or ethical committee submission.
